Activity 1: Fill D' Gram Directions: Based on the title, complete the chart by writing your answers opposite each question. (See page 22)		ICL
B. Establishing a purpose for the lesson ENGAGE	To begin with, kindly answer this activity to know where you are already at in this lesson. Directions: Read each statement carefully and then write TRUE on the space provided before the correct and FALSE statements for those that are not correct.	As you embark on this journey, study the paragraph taken from the story that you have just read. (See page 19)		Directions: Watch/listen to the song "Reflection" from the movie Mulan and answer the following questions. 	ICL

C. Discussing the new concepts and practicing new skills EXPLORE		Now, you are about to read “The Story of Keesh,” which was written by John Griffith London or Jack London.	Keep these essential questions in mind as you go through the process of critiquing a literary text. ✚Literary theory ✚ Marxist literary criticism ✚ feminist criticism
D. Developing Mastery EXPLAIN	ANALYSIS	The students will answer the following comprehension questions.	In critiquing a literary text under Marxist and feminist, the following questions should be taken into consideration: 1. What does the character believe in? 2. What role does the character play in the story? 3. What is the social class of the character? 4. What are the social forces that affect the author’s writing? 5. What is valued or sacrificed most by the character in the story? 6. How does the society view the character in the story?		Guide Questions: 1. What is the song all about? 2. How did Mulan reflect real society? What notion about women is revealed in the song? 3. What type of discrimination is experienced by the character in the song? 4. Does this kind of discrimination against women still exist these days? How or in what way? 5. Do you think women now enjoy equality with men? Why or why not?	ICL
E. Making generalization and abstraction about lesson ELABORATE	ABSTRACTION				Since literary criticism comes in the form of an essay, it is important for Marxists and feminists’ critics to ask the following questions:	ICL

F. Evaluation Learning EVALUATION	ASSESSMENT		Activity 1: Travel Time Imagine yourself traveling back to the time of Keesh. As you go on, stop in each train station and answer the question posted there.	Activity A: Directions: Read each item carefully. Choose the letter of the most appropriate answer. The teacher will give a short quiz.	Activity 2 Answer the following questions honestly and truthfully. Write your answers in your notebook. 1. In your point of view, do you believe that the author's background, status quo and life's experiences may affect his or her writings? Why or why not? 2. Do you think there is still bias in our society on how men and women are treated? Cite example/s.	ICL
G. Additional activities for application or remediation EXTEND	ASSIGNMENT			Directions: Using the information you wrote on Activity 1 and 2 and following the guide in 'What I Have Learned,' write a critique of "The Story of Keesh" by Jack London. Be guided by the following rubric.
